THE NEVADA COLLABORATORY

FALL 2018 PD COURSES

The 2018 school year marks our 3rd year of providing professional development courses to educators across Nevada. Our work continues to stand firmly on educational research - to positively impact teacher practices and student learning, educators must participate in professional learning that is focused on practice, knowledge based, ongoing, and chosen to meet an educator's individual needs. The Nevada Collaboratory strives to design and implement unique professional learning opportunities that match the characteristics recommended by educational research. Our new Inclusion Series, with a focus on Social and Emotional Learning, as well as the development of our Integration Series, focussed on true technology integration are a testament to this commitment.

The Clark County Education Association (CCEA), with its Professional Learning Program, has always recognized the importance of creating access to professional resources. Aligned with our vision, CCEA has provided The Nevada Collaboratory the support needed to build structures and processes to support educator learning.

The Nevada Collaboratory, with the support of CCEA, is the vehicle by which we will move towards a common, yet important goal of our profession: equity of educational excellence. We understand the promise of our educational community, and with offerings like our professional learning courses, seek to collectively take action and better our children's futures.

ABOUT THIS COURSE

Traditionally, educators are required to teach students core curriculum (e.g., reading, writing, math, science, social studies, etc.); however, the expectation has now expanded to include social/emotional learning. It is the goal of this course to provide educators with a working knowledge of resiliency and coping skills that can be applied in the classrooms to improve student achievement and performance.

TALKING ABOUT SUICIDE

AWARENESS SERIES

LOCATION: DEAN LAMAR ALLEN ES

ABOUT THIS SERIES

Building awareness of the risk factors for harming and suicide enables educators and licensed professionals to develop connections that aid in supporting this population. The aim of the Awareness Series is to expose educators and licensed professionals to intervention models to support the awareness of suicide risk and the application of coping skills and SafeTalk. This series is an asset for counselors, nurses, administrators, educators, and support staff.

ABOUT THIS COURSE

This class addresses the current trends regarding suicide and how to have conversations about suicide. It is important for staff members to understand the current laws and understand what their role is when dealing with suicide within our schools. Participants will also build their skill sets in the following areas: Communication styles, listening skills, supporting students, self-esteem builders for students, creating a safe learning environment and showing an interest in students.
